

Issues With Energy Sources

Douglas Swift, Sr.¹, Richard Erdlac, Jr.², and Anthony Swift³

¹*Swift-Arrow Geological Consultants*

²*Energy America Geothermal*

³*University of Pennsylvania Law School*

The world is rapidly approaching a peak to oil production. Renewable energy sources must be developed. Current energy resources include oil, gas, coal, nuclear, biomass/biowaste, wind, hydropower, solar, tidal, and geothermal. All have strengths and weaknesses. Planning for the future requires an unimpassioned consideration of possible weaknesses and pitfalls in development of new energy sources.