Drone Reality Check…What Drones Can't, Won't, and Flat-Out Refuse to Do

Michael Nash[1]

[1]University of Oklahoma

Abstract

Separating drone realities from drone hype is critical in an area that is seeing rapid development of technology, applications, and a legal framework that supports more uses of drones. Drones have inflamed the public imagination, however, and movies, science fiction, and commercials feature drones doing amazing things. The goal of this presentation is to discuss the types of challenges facing drone pilots, the individuals programming the drone / UAS, and those working with drone-derived data.