

What to Look For, What to Watch Out For

Jason Pederson

Abstract

Buying a drone is a hefty investment, no matter what the intended purpose will be. Whether it's to increase your productivity, to keep your employees safer, to get a fresh point of view, or just for recreation, you're putting some serious cash into this investment. In this course, we'll talk about how to make sure you make the right choice for your needs, and how to avoid the wrong ones that will leave you holding an expensive, but useless fleet of drones. Then, we'll discuss how to guard that investment and avoid senseless loss that all too many new drone pilots experience -- what to learn, how to train, and what risks NOT to take with your newly acquired assets.