

Petroleum Geology and Airborne Images: What We Can Do

Dave Koger¹

¹Harris Corporation

Abstract

Airborne-collected data share three common attributes. Solutions for many up/mid/down-stream problems are now more robust with emerging sensors and platforms, planning seismic and geochem studies, finding buried structures and possible surface geochemical anomalies, documenting surface conditions and damages.