

Business Cycle and Prospecting

Barry Rava¹

¹Icarus Oil and Gas, Inc.

Abstract

All industries and businesses run through high and low prices and demand cycles. Cycles are a very present part of oil and gas exploration and should be recognized and considered when designing an exploration or development plan. This is true regardless of company size, applying to majors and one-person shops. Recognition of business cycle characteristics will be discussed, as prospect flow and work that should be performed during each part of the cycle.